Macdonald released the letter today with no further com-The letter, however, speaks for itself:

"Dear Uncle Ben,

"Thanks for the unsolicited gift of your Fuddle Duck wines, Wise Old Owl ale, and those 10 red, red apples delivered to my doorstep last Friday.

"Alas, four apples cannot be recovered. The girls in my house swallowed them right down before I got home. I told them about Eve and her apple, but they didn't get the point. Charges are being stayed.

"I am returning your gift. I appreciate good intentions but cannot help thinking of the alderman who received a gold watch from a city contractor. He sent it back, saying—If this is a gift, it is too generous, and it it is more than a gift it is

"Kindest regards, and I will be seeing you at the liquor vendor's.

"Yours truly, Alex Macdonald."

The unseasonable cold in the West also affected British Columbia, with three inches of spow at Fort St. John in north eastern B.C.

Points along the B.C.-Alberta border reported heavy snow Monday night.

But Alberta was hit hard.

The snow, accompanied by high wifids, began in the province's northwest early Monday and was about four inches deep in the Grande Prairie area. It then moved south, dropping three inches at Jasper and Edson and between six and seven inches at Banff, the hardest-hit region where it was still falling heavily at midnight.

RCMP at Banff said the Banff-Jasper Highway was closed and that all eastbound traffic was being stopped at the east gate of Banff National Park and turned back toward the town for accommodation. A police spokesman said the main problem was a long hill on the Trans-Canada Highway about ven miles east of the town where many cars had slid into the ditch. Visibility was near zero on the highway.

Immediately following his "crying speech," Muskle's standing in the New Hampshire primary polls began to slip, and he finished with only 48 per cent of the Democratic primary vote — far short of his expectations.

During their Watergate investigation, federal agents established that hundreds of thousands of dollars in Nixon campaign contributions had been set aside to pay for an extensive undercover cam-paign aimed at discrediting individual Democratic presidential candidates and disrupting their campaigns.

"Intelligence work" is n mal during a campaign and is said to be carried out by both political parties. But federal investigators said what they uncovered being done by the Nixon forces is unprecedented in scope and intensity.

They said it included:
Following members of
Democratic candidates' families; forging letters and distributing them under the can-didates' letterheads; leaking false and manufactured items paign schedules into disarray; seizing confidential campaign and investigating the lives of dozens of Democratic campaign workers.

Three attorneys have told the Washington Post that as early as mid-1971 they were asked to work as agents provocateurs on behalf of the Nixon campaign. They said they were asked to undermine the primary campaigns of Democratic candidates by a man who has been identified in FBI reports as an opera-tive of the Nixon re-election organization.

All three lawyers, including one who is an assistant attor-ney general of the state of Tennessee, said they turned down the offers, which pur-portedly included the promise of "big jobs" in Washington after President Nixon's re-election. They said the overcommerce Maurice Stans.

No one is known to have made the 3,600-mile journey from the Atlantic coast to the Nile River alone. Moorehouse, 40, admits the prospect "petrifies" him, but says:

"I believe the most corrosive element attacking the greatness and goodness of the human spirit is fear; and its most insidious form — the fear of being afraid.

The longest known crossing by camel was a 2,100-mile ride from Cairo to Lagos made by a German, Frederick Hornemann, with a caravan at the end of the last century.

A Belgian expedition drove in six trucks from Morocco to Egypt in 1964, on a shoter, more northerly route.

Moorehouse, a former London newspaper man, estimates his trip will take about a year.

A report of the Morrow Commission on liquor reform sits on the shelves of the Provincial Library these days, now 21/2 years old and with some important reforms still

Probably the most important single recommendation to come out of the report, and one of the few to be implemented by the Socreds, was the lowering of the drinking age from 21 to the provincial. voting age of 19 years.

But another important recommendation has never seen the light of day, and does not appear any more imminent with the new NDP government than with the Socreds. That calls for the establishment of neighborhood pubs, referred to by the commission as community and village clubs. ## Doers and Watchers

The federal election campaign seems to be still searching for a dominant issue; and in lieu of one that is acceptable to all parties, and suitably recognized by the public, the opposition party leaders are picking their favorite complaints — which happen to be those they feel are most likely to gain yardage with the voters and banging them home against the government. This leaves the government, so far, mainly counterpunching, which is not a pointgetting style as a rule.

The opposition attacks, particularly those of Mr. Stanfield, lack the steam they might have carried because most of the arguments heard on the platforms and the hotlines have already been heard ad nauseam in the Commons. Mr. Lewis has won headlines with his thrusts against what he has termed — with headlines in mind

- the corporate welfare burns. His naming of names and his facile style have caught some attention. But for those of the public who have looked a little more deeply into the matter, M. Lewis' words have not stood up very well against the figures.

Quite often the NDP leader has been in conflict with himself, in that what he urges in the campaign is not always in harmony with what he was urging during the last session. In other words, the concessions to industry which he attacks - although sometimes he admits he would continue the same system himself — are at the moment basically a means of combatting unemployment, which he is also against. Chapter Two of Mr. Lewis' campaign, now beginning, apparently will deal with nationalism and domestic ownership of Canada's industrial complex - a very pertinent question and one which should get attention if he can avoid the half-the-picture type of politicking into which he so easi-

Mr. Stanfield's campaign is more difficult to categorize. For the last three years the Conservative leader has been trapped in the CBC syndrome — that is, he has felt compelled to come on the air willy-nilly each evening with a denunciation of what the government has done that day. Sometimes he could simply be against whatever Mr. Trudeau had said or done. Sometimes he could be in favor of it but criticize the timing or the degree. Sometimes he could merely say, oh yes, it's all right to do A, but how about B and C? Or if the government did B he could say, how about A and C?

Now, in the wider field of an election campaign, Mr. Stanfield, an honest and earnest man, apparently finds himself unable to break away from the critic's role and launch out on some attentiongetting policies of his own.

Thumbs Down

The city council of Rome has declined a private bid of $1 million for the Colosseum and the world notes with some appreciation the rejection of one of the most insensitive commercial offers made in recent times. The intent of the American would-be purchaser, according to news reports, was to restore the crumbling structure that millions have viewed as a relic of history and then to charge an admission fee to visitors on a straight commercial basis.

The structure, inaugurated by Titus in 80 A.D. and presumed to have had accommodation for between 40,000 and 50,000 spectators, can never be considered solely as a sideshow attraction for tourists. It is the physical evidence of a society, often barbaric in its cruelty but dominant in its time, that must remain a point of interest for all peoples. It cannot be transformed into the equivalent of a Disneyland set. It is Roman, but history has made it a possession of the world.

Against the centuries-old background of the Colosseum, the Rome council has obviously given the right signal in turning thumbs

B.C. May Tip the Scales

We've had our election in British Columbia and the result seems to have left us in a state of shock. But don't ignore that distant rumbling from the other side of the Rockies. Another political storm is blowing up. We'll soon be hit by a feder-

Local political candidates haven't done much to jar us out of our torpor. So in preparation for the day of reckoning, try this quick quiz. When is Election Day? Who represented Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich in the last House of Commons? Who are the present candidates? Which of them will you push along the road to Ottawa?

While B.C. dozes, the rest of Canada is wide awake about B.C. Didn't our voters upset the apple cart last August, spilling all those rosy-cheeked Social Crediters into the dust and replacing them with a horde of Socialists? And all without a word of warning. If an unheralded cataclysm can collect itself so quietly beneath the tranquil landscape of B.C., what subterranean forces are now massing in readiness to blow our broad Dominion sky-high?

Close Vote Forecast

Last month I attended in Quebec City a gathering of editors and publishers from all across our country. Many of them assured me that the voting this month will be so close that the results in B.C. will tip the scales. But then, newspapermen are like that - always hoping that something exciting is going to hap-

He seems to be going great guns still, and getting down to basic issues that the Liberals and Progressive-Conservatives try

If there was a consensus among my newspaper friends that has stood the test of two weeks it is that the Liberals are running scared, and that Robert Stanfield is missing a great chance to seize the initiative because he shilly-shallies instead of taking a firm stand.

Power Balance in the Pacific

The dramatic changes now taking place in East and Southeast Asia and affecting nearly every economic, political and defence pattern established there since the Second World War have so far been little understood in Canada. Our new relationship with China and our developing Asian trade in such things as grain, minerals and pulp may all be influenced by this important trend and the forces that are now emerging.

Not only are the long-established relationships between China and the Big Three - the U.S., Russia and Japan being altered, but all internal Asian relationships are being readjusted.

In the view of some Asia watchers, the pressures and problems of the Asian-Pacific regions will start to recede and become relegated to a "back burner" once United States ground forces have been withdrawn from Vietnam. This w could prove to be over-optimistic where new security aspects, following President Nixon's visit to China, are con cerned. Ignoring altered trade and political patterns for the moment, some of the immediate and long-range defence factors raise many new questions and fears.

As U.S. Withdraws

The United States would seem to be withdrawing from its policy of containment of China, whereas Russia, though unable to create a ring of bases around the borders of China, is clearly attempting to isolate China and Chinese influence in Asia.

As China presses forward in the building of a longer-range and more effective delivery system for her nuclear bombs, her present aim seems to be to prevent further Russian advances into Southeast Asia and the Indian sub-continent. Towards this end she must now seek to establish alliances and influence with her neighbors as well as with America and Japan to buy time. Her inexhaustible land forces can continue to pose a threat along thousands of miles of Russian border, but on sea and in the air China's forces are insignificant.

Until recently, many military experts considered it likely that Russia would be tempted to launch a pre-emptive attack before China could develop an effective missile-delivery system. In Moscow, President Nixon's visit to Peking raised immediate fears of a possible Sino-American or indeed a Sino-Japanese alliance, that would threaten Russia's security. Similarly in the United States, concern was felt about the long-term effect of any possible Chinese-Japanese alli-

After some sober reflections many of these immediate fears have started to recede, with the recognition that it is simply a matter of self-interest for all the great powers to ensure that an effective balance of power be maintained in the Pacific. For this reason the Soviet Union, Japan, China and the United States can not risk drawing too close to any one of the other powers for fear of provoking counter-alliances and confron-

Among the smaller Asian countries the problem will be to prevent the interference of the great powers in their internal affairs while they attempt to find solutions to their own endless problems of trade, border disputes, racial and cultural resentments and deep political and ideological differences. If the greatpower balance can be maintained, many national leaders in Vietnam, Korea, Cambodia, Malaysia, Tajwan and Indonesia are optimistic that in time they can work out their problems by them-

They consider it, therefore, essential that, to prevent Soviet expansion, the present American security pacts and systems in Asia be maintained. At a time when great realignments are taking place in Asia, they consider it tragic that isolationist trends are restricting the role of the United States in world leadership. In this connection some smaller Asian countries now seriously question whether, in fact, the United States would risk a nuclear confrontation to protect a small state.

The possibility of conventional wars between smaller Asian states is not discounted. But some Asians feel that, free of super-power interference, they can settle such conflicts by their own efforts, individually, bilaterally or collectively. Meanwhile, they argue, they must try to avoid being dragged into Sino-Soviet rivalries. Certainly there would appear to be strong arguments for the smaller nations to adopt policies of non-alignment despite economic and diplomatic overtures from Russia or Japan aiming at a confinement of China. Whether these views are realistic remains to be seen. Those questioning this forecast point to Japan's pressing need to find markets and to secure resources, particularly oil, for her immense industry. They also ask about Taiwan. Will Taiwan end her large trade with Japan if that country resumes her relations with China and China demands this as a price for her friendship? On a broader scale, there are doubts as to how long the great four-power balance can be maintained in Asia, with three of the powers, the United States, Russia and China, having nuclear weapons and Japan lacking this decisive wea-

Japanese authorities protest that nuclear arms are out of the question for them, as their huge concentrations of population in limited target areas make them too vulnerable. Further, they explain that while Japan does have the industrial capacity and expertise to build a nuclear arsenal, it does not have the necessary geography for testing any rocket development. Added to this is the enormous public pressure against any nuclear armament in Japan.

. Such protests are regarded with suswho point out that Japan leads the world in ship-building capacity, and a widely dispersed fleet of Japanese nuclear submarines would quickly alter the entire strategic balance and serve to protect Japan's congested islands through threat of retaliation. Considerable weight is added to this speculation in view of the threat that the Soviet Union poses to Japan's vital supplies of oil from the Middle East. through the Indian Ocean. Some 80 per cent of Japan's oil supplies are dependent on this route. Understandably, Japan would be no happier if she became dependent on oil moving by pipeline through Siberia or Manchuria.

Nations of Discontent

It cannot be overlooked, either, that two of the four great powers in Asia remain discontented nations. Chinese discontent embraces, the questions of Taiwan, her 4,000 miles of disputed border with the Soviet Union and her seeming encirclement

Japanese pride will hardly remain content, if she is to depend on the United States nuclear umbrella, and to be unable to protect her own trade routes with adequate naval forces. Both China and Japan harbor some resentment of the presence of "alien powers" in Southeast Asia and the extent of their economic and military interests.

Added to this complex strategic picture is the remote but not-to-be ignored factor of India's new military posture of power. With the defeat of Pakistan, India now sees herself in a leadership role in Asia. Despite her industrial and financial limitations, a few voices in India are today hinting at India's requirement of nuclear weapons. Others ask whether India imagines that this could be financed with American aid money. Nonetheless, possibilities of Indian military adventures cannot be ruled out.

Both Japan, with her enormous financial and industrial stake in Asia, and India, with her pretensions to world power, must wonder whether it is pure coincidence that the five permanent members of the UN Security Council are also the world's five nuclear powers, Emiliano Zapata and Panaho Villa led the Mexican revolution under the slogan "Tierra y" libertad" — land and freedom. But 60 years later the peasants have little more freedom than in 1810 and are still struggling for

In the state of Guerrero ("warrior"), which provided many of the most dedicated Zapatistas, the government Justice Brigade of the Party of the Poor," whose leader Lucio Cabanas accused the army of torturing and killing peasants of the region, and of using helicopters to bomb and burn their villages. In other states, invasions of latifundies — vast monopolistic farms — by landless rural workers are leading to rising numbers of clashes with the

The peasants, of predominantly Indian ancestry, feel entitled to the land they need, under both the traditional communal system of land-holding by villages dating from long before the Spanish conquest, and under the agrarian reform laws for which the revolutionaries

Under the traditional system, the common land (ejido) had been shared among the families who worked it. Through the 19th century, the big farmers used every kind of legal and illegal trickery to obtain land, and by population — owned over half the country, tying the la-borers to their farms by the debts that mounted up for ever more expensive food.

Though exports rose, food production for the domestic market fell by about .06 per cent annually at the beginning of the century. The peasant had to pay higher prices

The Zapata revolution established an agrarian reform-law recognizing the communal right to ejidos and break-ing up the latifundios for distribution to the villages and smallholders. The law stated that farms could not be mortgaged or seized for debt, in an attempt to protect the new holders from legal manipulations.

The reforms were adequate for the population level of the time, but land distribution has not kept pace with the birth rate. The laws to protect the poor have been forgot-ten, ignored and even replaced. Ironically, some of the old revolutionary chiefs once in power took advantage of the land distribution to fence plots into their own family

By 1960, over 40 per cent of the arable land was again contained in less than three per cent of the holdings. Some 90,000 familes have managed to obtain two-thirds of all arable land. Of the peasants on communal ejidos, the lack of machinery and resources force 60 per cent to rent it out to the latifundistas and work as serfs

Remembering the articles of the 1915 revolutionary agrarian law which state that every Mexican has the right to possess and cultivate land up to a certain size, the two million Mexicans who now possess none have become impatient with the reform that never reaches them and are taking over latifundios by force.

In a typical invasion recently in the state of Veracruz, peasants occupied the Lombardia latifundio and ex-pelled the latifundista's family. The police arrived to evict them under gunfire, and 18 were killed or wounded.

Occupations of latifundios have become so common in the northern states of Guanajuato and Queretaro that the government has ordered an inquiry and arrested. Humberto Serrano Perez, secretary-general of the agrarian council accused of instigating the invasions. Over 400 angry peasants began a permanent assembly in front of the council building, demanding Perez's release and land.

The government formed by President Luis Echeverria of the monolithically bureaucratic Institutional Revolutionary Party — the only holder of power since 1929 — has unconditional support from the corrupt right-wing trade union leadership. It is now having to change its methods to hold on to its power, forcing the resignations of some of its most conservative figures associated with the repression of the last president, Gustavo Diaz Ordaz, and allowing greater opposition activity.

Luis Echeverria cannot meet the basic needs of the land-hungry peasantry without expropriating the latifundios. And that would require another revolution.

...With Tough Guerrilla As Leader

By MARLISE SIMONS The Washington Post

MEXICO CITY - Pablo Cabanas (pronounced Kah-Bahn-Yas) was just one of the many peasants who joined Emiliano Zapata's guerrilla band during the 1910 Mexican revolution. But he survived the seven years of civil war and eventually rose to the rank of general in the federal

Lucio Cabanas, Pablo's 33year-old grandson, also took to the mountains in rebellion against the government - but he did so only five years ago. 'And now it's a crime just to be called Cabanas," Celerina said. "Since the army can't catch Lucio, his relatives are picked up and tortured for information about his where-

In the year since Lucio Ca-banas emerged as Mexico's toughest guerrilla leader - clashing with the army and kidnapping wealthy landowners for ransom on behalf of the poor - 13 of his relatives, including an elderly aunt, have been held for questioning by army and secret police. One brother, three uncles and six cousins still are in

But the Cabanas family is merely the most dramatic il-lustration of a routine army small guerrilla movement in anti-insurgency warfare, it is reliably reported to resort to the cruder ing relatives and friends of suspected guerrillas. Captured terrorists are subjected to even rougher treatment in order to extract information about their colleagues.

More Brutal

Paradoxically, the army's repression of extreme leftist brutal at the same time that ident Luis Echeverria has freedom and social justice in Political observers specuhave concluded that the price support for his program of "democratization" is to wipe out the extreme left. And the signs are that the army has Yet Echeverria wants as few political prisoners as possible. In contrast to previous government legal persecution of political opponents has diminished, and sentences are shorter or preferably avoided al-

The activists of the 1968 student protest movement, who were still in jail when Echeverria took office in December, 1970, have been recognized as political prisoners. In 1971 the president ordered the release of 78 of them, and this year the remaining 18 were granted conditional freedom. A few weeks ago, sentences of 18 to 25 years for 10 students held since 1967 on charges of conspiracy and damage to property were substantially wered. (To mark the death of Che Guevara, the students had placed a bomb in the Bolivian embassy.).

Intimidation

But alongside this greater judicial leniency is the brutality of army and secret police which prisoners and lawyers say has increased in recent posedly are designed to deter and intimidate further leftist maintains that there are neither guerrillas nor political prisoners in Mexico. The 70 or so guerrillas (no exact figures available) arrested for kidnappings and bank as-saults in the last year have been denounced by Defense Minister Cuenca Diaz as "bandite" and are considered ordinary criminals. Inside the jails, however, the guerrillas victs and kept isolated in cells

In strict historical terms however, the 1968 protesters and the current guerrillas form part of the same political phenomenon. When the 1968 movement was crushed by the army in the Plaza de Tlatelolco just before the Olympic Games, with perhaps 200 people killed, a number of young Mexican activists com-plained that the regime had closed the door to peaceful change and decided to take up five lawyers have been de-fending political prisoners and guerrillas without pay since the 1968 student movement. They say their task is difficult and frustrating, since often they can be of little assis-tance to the accused.

We serve to give credibility to the process," explains Guillermo Andrade. iudicial "Since we are not politically aligned, we are tolerated, but we cannot really function ac cording to the law. This role of the army in civilian affairs is a source of great worry to the lawyers. Army units guard civilian jails where political prisoners are kept. The army, together with the secret police, also appears to be in charge of kidnapping and interrogating suspects. "Of course, it is altogether unconstitutional for the army to do police work," says lawyer Andrade.

Fact of Life

But cruel methods of interrogation are not reserved in Mexico for political prisoners only, several lawyers remark. Official violence against pris oners is a well established practice, the lawyers say, and particularly among the power-less urban poor and peasants, torture is regarded as a rou-tine fact of life. City intellectuals frequently discuss the issue in private, yet neither lawyers' associations nor official opposition parties de nounce it openly

U.K. Alters Role Of Bank Rate

LONDON (AP) - Britain announced Monday that the economy. bank rate, the Bank of England's prime lending rate which traditionally governed all borrowing, will be given a different role in national fi-

The effect will be that changes in the rate no longer will be a ready indicator of shifts in government economic policy. Bank-rate changes in the past have signalled a

Mortgage Rate Rise Predicted

VANCOUVER (CP) - The leaders of the Canadian Real Estate Association predict interest rates on mortgages will start creeping up again early next year and may again reach 10 per cent.

Canada's close ties with world money markets, particularly those n the United States, dictate the expected increase, officials of the CREA said in interviews.

Albert Fish of Guelph, Ont., president-elect of th CREA, said that demand for housing will continue, but suggested that the accelerated building rate of the last 18 months will slow down. High-growth areas such as Toronto, Vancouver, Calgary and Edmonton, will continue to experience heavy demand for housing, he said.

Thomas Byrne of St. John's, Nfld., one of the two vicepresidents of the association, said the housing business in said the housing business in the Martime provinces will probably stay buoyant, with the main factors being a continued lack of housing and discovery of oil off the coast.

However, inflation may be a problem and newer mort-gage rates haven't helped, he 'The small man at the bot-on whose salary isn't rising as fast as the rest of the working force is the one going to be hurt."

NEWSPAPERS BACK NIXON

NEW YORK (Reuter) — President Nixon has received re-election endorsement from 668 newspapers with only 38 newspapers coming out for his opponent George McGovern, says a survey released by the trade magazine Editor and Publisher.

The papers backing Nixon have a combined circulation of more than 17 million, while the McGovern papers have a circulation of 1.5 million.

eirculation of 1.5 million.

Editor and Publisher said it polled 1,764 newspapers and received responses from 875. A total of 169 papers who responded said they were either uncommitted or independent.

Constantly Changing Problems Keep Port Chief on His Toes

VANCOUVER (CP) — A port manager usually looks the part—dark suit, pipe, solemn air and eyes that have known the form known the fury of the seven

But not port of Vancouver's Bill Duncan. In a bright red shirt that is actually tone down by an even brighter red and blue tie, the short, wiry 59-year-old looks more like a successful rancher than the boss of Canada's busiest port.

He is cheerful, talkative, has never been a professional seaman and, although he belongs to the Royal Van-S couver Yacht Club, he has never owned a boat.

"I ride on other people's. It's cheaper and more fun,' he explains.

Duncan, after three years as acting manager of the port, was named manager late last month. His job and his harbor with all their head-aches are his favorite topic of "Things are changing every day," he said. "Take containers, they are our answer today. Tomorrow they could be the answer that wasn't the answer.

In the long run he is not

NO REAL COMPETITION

Although Seattle appears to be indirect competition because it is currently handling containers destined for Vanouver, it really isn't, he said. Right now Seattle is a main shipping port for containers of war materials bound for the Vietnam area. On the return trip, a container ship picks up whatever container cargoes

"An average vessel pulling into Seattle with 400 containers might have 350 pounds for Seattle and 50 for Vancouver. It doesn't make sense to bring a vessel up here for 50 containers, so they are unloaded

"This is largely why containers bound for Vancouver-are going through Seattle. Even if we had the container facilities, these vessels wouldn't be using them." Another aspect is that Seattle is basically a coastal trad-ing port while Vancouver is a deep sea port, he said.

Of the 22 million tons a year handles, two-that Seattle handles, two-thirds of it is coastal trade, especially to Alaska. On the other hand, only a third of Vancoucer's 35 million tons a year is coastal as good as the local board and trade, Duncan said. "The idea, of course, is only like the coastal as good as the local board and we have a pretty good one

"But there is no question we do need more container fa-cilities in Vancouver. But it isn't necessarily because of Seattle.'

Duncan said he likes the new set-up with a local harbor authority he can deal with in-stead of having to deal directly with Ottawa.

"It is much easier for a port manager to talk to local people who know the local sitpeople who know the local sit-uation," he said. "I can't speak for other port manag-ers in Canada, but the basic idea is an excellent one for we have a pretty good one here, a good cross-section of the community." The port of Vancouver authority is headed by former city mayor Bill Rathle and its membership in-cludes representatives from city council, the business community, waterfront employers and unions. But Duncan said he believes the final control over the port should always be in Ottawa.

"There is a danger in com-plete local autonomy of being too parochial. One can easily wind up building facilities just to justify one's own position without an over-all view of the country's needs. We need what we have right now—cen-tral control with some local

Duncan forsees the gradual disappearance of bulk handling from Vancouver harbor except for grain. It will generally be containers and packaged wood. The grain elevators will stay because of the massive capital investment

For under $100 we know of no other portable calculator that will give you office machine accuracy and convenience away from the office. The DIGI-MATIC 8 is the kind of personal-size calculator you've been waiting for. Fast, accurate, durable, attractive, the DIGI-MATIC 8 adds, subtracts, multiplies. divides and does mixed calculations anytime, anywhere. Instantly. Without any excuses. Here's why:

Floating decimal

Some portable calculators have a fixed decimal, This leads to small errors when you multiply or divide using a few decimal places, gross errors when working with many decimal places. The DIGI-MATIC 8 has a floating decimal. Which means it doesn't round figures off to one or two decimals. The decimal point goes where it has to go to give you the correct answer

Constant key

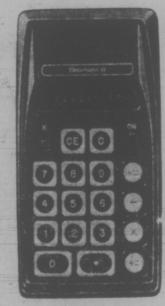

Special constant key permits continuous multiplication or division.

CE key

Say you're working to a final total through a long set of calculations. And you make a mistake on the last entry. The CE key allows you to clear the wrong entry and put in the correct one. There's no need to start all over from the beginning.

Portable power counts

Many portable calculators offer you only minutes of portable calculating time. The DIGI-MATIC 8 offers you up to 3 hours. You see, some other cal-culators use small throw-away batteries, Like some toys. But the DIGI-MATIC 8 is powered by rechargeable ni-cad batteries (recharger included). You simply plug it in and while you're using it, the DIGI-MATIC 8 is recharging itself.

Earlier in the game, witnessed by a crowd of 714, North Shore counted on a 42-yard single by Chris Bennett and a conceded safety touch by Dolphin punter Reg Edson. Bennett also converted Ivancoe's second touchdown.

Fullback Gord Mitchell scored an unconverted major for Dolphins in the second quarter on a dive from the one after Hans DeGoede recovered a Cougar fumble on the North Shore 27.

Dolphins hut off Pantages passing game in the second half and closed the gap on a 16-yard touchdown pass from Ron Taylor to split end Jack Munch early in the fourth quarter. Leon Mitchell, whose touchdown drive from the one on the previous play was wiped out by a clipping penalty, converted.

Taylor quarterbacked Dol-phins until late in the overwhen regular Greg Gardner, nursing a knee injury, took command.

Mitchell tied the game with field goal. The score came right after Munch's touchdown when Cougars' Bill Triance fumbled the kick re-turn on his own 42 and linebacker Murray Leitch recovered for Victoria.

This is Fire Prevention Week all over North America and fire departments are trying to educate the public.

Lieutenant Richard Warner of Victoria fire department said posters, school book covers, table mats in restaurants, and pamphlets are popping up all over the city.

Firemen will visit 45 public and private schools which ac-commodate 11,000 students to conduct fire drills and give lec-tures on fire prevention in the home.

"The students are in competition with each other," said

Warner. Two awards will be given — the Victoria Schools Fire proficiency Shield to a school with fewer than 500 students, and the Firefighters Challenge Trophy to a school with more than 500 students.

An art competition for grades one, two and three students will be sponsored by Victoria Coal and Heating Ltd., a pioneer fuel company, said Warner.

Entries will be on display at the school board office, 3128 Foul Bay, until Oct. 27, when they will be judged by Chief Eric Simmons, a school board representative and a member Eric Simmons, a school board representative and a member of the press.

In addition to education programs in the schools, Fire Prevention Week will include lectures and demonstrations for hospitals, rest homes, business and retail groups, apartment blocks, community groups; and business schools.

City Hall was evacuated at 10:20 this morning and a flagraising ceremony held on Pandora. A proclamation was read by acting mayor Harold Olafson.

THE FIAT 128 FOUR-DOOR

AN BRINGS YOU GOOD NEWS

One of the most remarkable things about the front-wheel drive Fiat 128 you see pictured above is that, while on the outside it's 10 inches shorter than the Volkswagen Beetle, on the inside it borders on the cavernous.

For example, in the front, you get the exact same headroom you get in the slightly more expensive Cadillac DeVille, more hip room than a Toyota Corona or a Dodge Colt, and the same leg room as a Chrysler Newport.

And in the back, where small cars are really small, you get 2 inches more knee room than the Volkswagen Beetle, 10 inches more hip room than a Chevy Vega, 1/2 inch more head-room than a Lincoln Continental, and more room to get in and out of the back door than any four-door sedan we know of.

All of which is one of the big reasons why, in Europe, where the average family averages more people than in Canada, they buy more Fiats than any other car.

Thanksgiving Joy: 10 Pounds of Potatoes

One of our Thanksgiving joys was — you'll never guess it — a 10-pound cache of Netted Gem potatoes discovered inside the compost heap.

The squash plants yielded their last small fruits, leaves crisp and brown with frost, so were hauled from their summer perch on top of the heap.

It was then that we rememberd having seen a potato plant starting up earlier in the season. Sure enough, the brown lanky stems lay over the side of the soil heap which had resulted from five months of watering the squash plants.

Gently exploring, we talked of enjoying at least one meal of freshly dug potatoes, "compost grown" literally. First to be unearthed, a modest four by two specimen, and then to our astonishment in quick succession seven beautiful monsters weighing a pound each, and measuring seven by three inches. Together with the four medium sizes, the one root gave a yield of just under 10 pounds.

No world record I know, but for an uncultivated stray tuber in the compost heap, a truly exciting and happy discovery.

I think the lesson to be learned is one already familiar to observant gardeners; that is, potatoes will produce big healthy crops without even planting the seed potato below ground. Warm loose material all around them, and enough water during the growing period to swell the tubers are the main requirements.

Some few home gardeners spread a two-inch deep strip of half-rotted compost on the soil surface in spring , set cut potato pieces at intervals along the strip, then cover with four to five inches of nearly completed compost. They add more if potato tubers are seen poking out during summer, never allowing green coloring to spoil the flavor when ready for catting.

This method eliminates the need for hilling, and what is more, it eliminated digging — almost. The tubers grown in rows of compost above soil level can be lifted on the old vines, unless they weigh-in like our few did.

Late this fall, I'm thinking of taking one section of our Late this fall, I'm thinking of taking one section of our rather large compost heap to set a few sprouted potato pieces. Being a couple of feet above ground, they should be free of freezing during winter since very little moisture will be retained by the mixed grass and plant material predominating in the heap.

They will make roots in early spring, and hopefully give us new potatoes by the end of May.

You can try it too, just for the fun of it. There's something very elemental in the lifting of food from last year's waste.

Missing Hunter Hunted

QUESNEL (CP)—A ground party searched without suc-cess Monday for an Ameri-can hunter, identified only as H. Starrs, about 45, of Me-sich. Mich., missing in bush country about 25 miles west

A plane was to search the area, near the headwaters of Baker Creek, today.

Starrs was hunting with a local guide and failed to rendezvous Sunday with the guide after the two had split up for a time.

The guide fired several shots and they were answered, presumably by the missing hunter, but they appeared to come from dis-tances progressively further

Because the development proposal conforms with all zoning requirements for the area, "there is no means by which a permit can be withheld," Young said today.

The developer, Shangri-la Estates Ltd., was issued a permit last week for a $1.5 million, 154-suite apartment on a 2,6-acre site at Dock Street and Dailas Road, facing the

The hospital's two medical wings were brought up to modern standards early this year in the first phase of the renovation program which began in January of 1971.

While phase one cost $930,000, Hemmings declined to speculate what the next steps might cost for fear it might influence contractors bids. Earlier estimates put the total cost of modernizing the 25-year-old hospital at $4 million to $5 million with completion in 1974 or 1975.

SURGERY CHANGES

Phase two will see revamping of the two surgical wings, which means trimming one of the wings with 24-bed wards down to four and two-bed wards. The other wing has all semi-private rooms now,

Toilet and washing facilities will be expanded in both wings, nursing stations improved as well as such features as lighting and fire protection.

Plans will likely be finished in about six weeks and the work completed about a year from award of contracts, said Hemmings. *

Phase three would see cometion of patient area modifications and phase four, still at the tentative planning stage, would see areas like laboratory and dietary sections dealt with.

The hospital is using a fourbed ward for its intensive care unit. How the intensive care unit will be expanded is still under consideration but that work will be part of the

However, the fact that a permit had been issued did not necessarily mean the project would go ahead, he said. He did not elaborate, other than saying he had reason to believe that "financing could be a problem."

Young said he would have preferred to see the southern portion of the site, adjoining the waterfront, acquired by the city and preserved as open land, together with a better type of development on the northern section of the property.

A false fire alarm followed by a bomb threat sent Victoria firemen racing to Bay Street Armoury twice within a quarter of an hour this

Chief Eric Simmons said investigation had been turned over to police, assisted by voice recordings kept by the fire department alarm room.

When such help is given by someone trained in first aid there is no problem. Often however, well-meaning laymen do more harm than good in their efforts to help the accident victim.

Mrs. O. G. Miller, assistant head nurse in emergency at Royal Jubilee Hospital, says "doing nothing" is often better than administering the wrong kind of treatment.

Where Are Unwed Mothers?

rate of illegitimate births in the United States is on the rise, yet homes for unwed mothers are closing their doors faster than vaudeville houses after talkies came in. And those that remain open report a dropping occupancy rate. New uses are being found for the facilities. But where are the girls "in trouble" going?

the field predict that in 10 years, homes for unwed mothers will be extinct.

The drop began almost im perceptibly as early as 1966

The reasons are obvious: Increased availability of abortions, more and more widespread knowledge about birthcontrol methods, more babies and the financial crush Some say the last two factors contribute most significantly, since the illegitimacy rate has

Sooner or later every homeowner has to decide if he wants to plant a hedge or put a fence around his property.

Hedges for Eastern Canada offers valuable advice. Nearly all of it also applies to the rest of Canada. This 8-page leaflet underlines, for in-stance, that an ornamental hedge will require almost as much care as a flower border. You also have to consider that a hedge takes up more space than a fence.

Once you have weighed the pros and cons and decided that it is a hedge you want, you have to figure out what height you want it to be. To help you in your choice, the leaflet lists hedges that are less than two feet high and others that will grow up to 10 feet. It also indicates best

In addition, it tells you how to plant, prune and maintain your hedge and, if necessary, how to restore it to good health with a special pruning, feeding and watering pro-

How to Stay Healthy When Abroad

ations when going abroad is how to guard their health. Naturally, the first consideration is what shots will be necessary. Today a small pox vaccination is no longer required if you are travelling directly to Europe, the Soviet Union, Mexico, Canada or the Car ibbean, but it is required for entry into Central and South Ameri-can countries except Egypt, Tunisia, and Morrocco. It is also required in Hong Kong, Macao, Indonesia, Australia, and the

According to the New York State Department of Health, New Zealand required immunization certificates only if the traveller has come by plane. If he comes by steamer and was infected when he started, he will probably have come down with the disease before he gets to New Zealand, and will then have to be confined and not be permitted to enter the country.

Some South American and African countries require vaccination examine values there.

tion against yellow fever. If you are going to Africa, some Middle East countries, Southeast Asia, India, Nepal, Indonesia, or the Philippines, you should be innoculated against cholera.

Specific immunization requirements for certain countries can change from time to time, and travellers should check with their local health department before leaving for their destination.

carefully guarded water supply — guarded so that it cannot become infected with disease - producing germs — the traveller would do well not to drink water, or any other fluid into which a waiter, perhaps with infected hands, could have dropped a cube

Some years ago when travelling in a Central American country, I drank only bottled water that I could open myself at the table. I did not let the waiter put ice into it. Also I did not eat salads or fruit that had been handled in the kitchen. I ate only foods tat came to my table hot, so that the heat would kill the germs. Another way I protected myself was to drink a glass of beer or wine when I was thirsty.

There is the "Interprinal Association for Medical Assisbeer or wine when I was thirsty.

There is the "International Association for Medical Assistance to Travellers," a free, non-profit service organized by a respected globe-trotting Italian physician, which maintains 140 offices in 50 countries. The person going abroad can write to LAMAT, 745 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, for a list of good doctors, telephone numbers around the world.

Another service, "Intermediate, Inc.," 777 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017, publishes a directory of English-speaking pshysicians in 79 countries. These men have been screened for skill and qualifications by an American medical panel. The directory costs $5, and comes with a membership to the organization.

ESQUIMALT - SAANICH

The incredible government bungling which has produced an unemployment insurance fund deficit that could easily hit $700,000,000 by the end of this year is just one part of the four-year national scandal that has been the Trudeau Regime.

Haphazard, ill-conceived welfarism and the unemployment insurance mess now facing the taxpayer has been Canada's lot since the Trudeau clique

Canadians can no longer tolerate such mismanagement of their business, but the Liberals indicate they plan no improvements. If anything, they suggest, the situation will only worsen.

The Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich hinted as much, when he said at his nominating meeting "it is essential that we maintain a high level of taxation" to support what the Liberals claim is social reform.

BUT . . .

A Stanfield Conservative government in Ottawa will immediately move to put the Canadian economy back on sound footing, with positive programs of job-creation replacing the unthinking, demoralizing and bankrupting handouts the Trudeau regime has used to create a generation of welfare bums.

Mr. Stanfield is committed to full employment policies because the Conservative Party believes Canada needs the contributions of all citizens and that the vast majority of jobless Canadians now would prefer to live from the fruits of their own efforts.

Donald Munro, your Conservative candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, is a member of the Stanfield team and the best man for the big job ahead in Ottawa.

Macdonald released the letter today with no further comment. The letter, however, speaks for itself:

"Dear Uncle Ben, "Thanks for the unsolicited gift of your Fuddle Duck wines, Wise Old Owl ale, and those 10 red, red apples delivered to my doorstep last Friday.

"Alas, four apples cannot be recovered. The girls in my house swallowed them right down before I got home. I told them about Eve and her apple, but they didn't get the point. Charges are being stayed.

'I am returning your gift. I appreciate good intentions' but cannot help thinking of the alderman who received a gold watch from a city contractor. He sent it back, saying—If this is a gift, it is too generous, and if it is more than a gift it is

"Kindest regards, and I will be seeing you at the liquor

Blizzard Strands Hundreds

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Blizzard conditions in Alberta, with more than seven inches of snow at Banff, and a surge of arctic air that drove temperatures to crop-killing, and in some places record lows, in Ontario dominated weather news in Canada today.

The violent snowstorm in western Alberta on the slopes of the Rockies stranded hundreds of Thanksgiving weekend vacationers away from home.

Calgary's streets were sheets of ice.

Points along the B.C.-Alberta border reported heavy snow Monday night,

But Alberta was hit hard.

The snow, accompanied by high winds, began in the provdeep in the Grande Prairie area. It then moved south, dropping three inches at Jasper and Edson and between six and, seven inches at Banff, the hardest-hit region where it was still falling heavily at midnight.

RCMP at Banff said the Banff-Jasper Highway was closed and that all eastbound traffic was being stopped at the east gate of Banff National Park and turned back toward the town for accommodation. A police spokesman said the main problem was a long hill on the Trans-Canada Highway about seven miles east of the town where many cars had slid into the ditch. Visibility was near zero on the highway.

The recent statement of the president of the German Bundesbank, Karl Klasen, in praise of the recovering strength of the dollar is a case in point.

STAND ECHOEED

It reflected the West German government's determination, heavily reinforced by pressures from German excial interests, not to upvalue the mark again. Another mark revaluation or dollar de-valuation might be necessary if the U.S. payments position were conceded to be weak

In his recent speech before the International Monetary Fund, Helmut Schmidt, who West Germany's "super-minister" of economic affairs and finance, echoed the Kla-sen position. "We Ack-nowledge and admire the progress you have made so far in 1972," said Schmidt. "This progress can reduce your deficits and in the end your deficits and in the end overcome them."

But a former close aide of Karl Schiller, who favored flexible exchange rates, persists in seeing the U.S. dollar as overvalued. Withelm Hankel, formerly head of the German Economies Ministry's money and credit section and now president of the Hesnow president of the Heshas called for Airther devaluation of the dollar as a first and essential step toward nternational monetary form.

Ironically, the U.S. government's position is closer to Hankel's than to Schmidts. The speech that Secretary of the Trreasury Goerge P. Schultz delivered to the IMI. calling for greater exchangerate flexibility in the wor monetary system, sanction against governments that re-fused to upvalue their curren cies when they accumulate excess reserves, and trade II peralization, is founded on a mains to be done to restore the dollar's strength. Top U.S. officials continue to stress this country's blg trade deficit. Last year's trade deficit was $2.7 billion. During the second quarter of this year, the deficit of U.S. merchandise exports over imports was running at an annual rate of $7.7 billion.

DRAMATIC SWING

To be sure, what deter-mines the value of the dollar in the money markets of the world is not the balance of trade but the over-all balance of payments, and there has been a dramatic swing back from the enormous deficits of the summer and fall of 1971. But this improvement has been caused mainly by the huge speculative short-term capital flows, which are con-cealed in so-called "errors and omissions" in the balance of payments statement.

In the third quarter of 1973, the "errors and omissions" account showed an outflow from the U.S. of $21.5 billion. In the first outside of the

However, this observer counts himself as a relative optimist on the U.S. blance of payments.

POSITION IMPROVE

Rough comparisons of liv-ing costs at home and abroad are a highly imperfect guide to the factors influencing the supply and demand for dol-lars in international ex-change. On the price front, one should have a more precise index not of over-all re-tail prices but of wholesale-prices of goods traded in export markets. Accurate measures of comparative export prices do not exist. However, two econo-mists — Robert E. Lipsey of the National Bureau of Eco-nomic Research and Irving Kravls of the University of Pennsylvania — who have studied relative price movements in several countries conclude that the U.S. trading position has markedly improved since the devaluation.

However, Kravis and Lip-sey note that export prices do not completely parallel ex-change rates in the short run.

International competition checks the ability to raise export prices when domestic prices rise. Disadvantaged exporters absorb exchange rate Nevertheless, their profitability from foreign sales is affected, and this gradually causes a redirection of ex-ports away from the devalu-ing country. The U.S. should the coming two years.

At the same time, the attractiveness of producing more in the U.S. — and exporting more from this country - is rising. American country — is rising. American unit labor costs are now ris-ing more slowly than in 10 other industrial countries Canada, Japan, Belgium, France, West Germany, Italy, Netherlands, Sweden, Swit-zerland, and the United King-

To be sure, new troubles could lie ahead for the dollar — if the budget stays in heavy deficit, if inflation accelerates trouble breaks out in other countries. For the dollar remains the world's key "intervention" currency, and an un-loading of dollars by some other country to cover its own deep deficits could hurt the

OTHERS OVERTAKE

Even more basically, many economists are worried that the U.S. is losing comparative advantage across broad range of manufacturing industries, as other nations, with lower labor costs, overtake the technological lead of this

Thus, even though the relatively short-term outlook for the dollar is improving, the U.S. government is trying to negotiate a long-term reform system that will safeguard system that will sateguard this country's trade and payments position and enable domestic policy to conceptrate upon achieving high employment. Essentially, the U.S. wants a system of more lawible exchange rates to liexible exchange rates to keep its external payments in balance, whatever the rela-tive cost and price trends here and in other countries.

Apartment Knocked

The federal government has approved a start on planning for the second and third modernization phases at Veterans' Hospital, director Dr.C .H.Hemmingssaidtoday.

The hospital's two medical wings were brought up to modern standards early this year in the first phase of the renovation program which began in January of 1971.

While phase one cost $930,000, Hemmings declined to speculate what the next steps might cost for fear it might influence contractors' bids. Earlier estimates put the total cost of modernizing the 25-year-old hospital at $4 million to $5 million with completion in 1974 or 1975.

SURGERY CHANGES

Phase two will see revamping of the two surgical wings, which means trimming one of the wings with 24-bed wards down to four and two-bed wards. The other wing has all semi-private rooms now.

Toilet and washing facilities will be expanded in both wings, nursing stations improved as well as such features as lighting and fire protection. Plans will likely be finished in about six weeks and the work completed about a year from award of contracts, said Hemmings.

Phase three would see com-pletion of patient area modifications and phase four, still at the tentative planning stage, would see areas like laboraotry and dietary sec-tions dealt with. The hospital is using a four-bed ward for its intensive care unit. How the intensive care unit will be expanded is still under consideration but that work will be part of the
